'The children should not only be taught something of our history, but a great deal (the atternoon of Washington's Birthday. At here the power of the one ends should be given practical lessons in depositing the ballot, so that when at the ing the assistance of a ward heeler."

There is sound suggestion in every line of this. The principles of government can easily be made so attractive and interesting in the public schools that pupils will be pleased and glad to study them; and having mastered the rudiments while their minds are still being developed, they will be prepared in after years to intelligently study the bearings of the great issues that arise in State or National or municipal life.

A minister in an Illinois village, the latest addition to the clerical blacklist, libelled his own wife in an effort to blackmail a resident of another town. There seems to have been a plague of misdoing among men of the cloth during a few months past. There have been cierical forgers and robbers and wife-beaters and false pretenders. Yet the popular respect for the clergy as a body has not been perceptibly affected, and that this is so is the strongest possible tribute to the worth and faithfulness of the world's preachers as a general body.
